

one a gallon increased from thirteen to sixteen cents "so as to cover and defences the extent of the trade under present conditions." While the price of the dealer is protected, the consumer either empties his own or goes without his milk. This is inclined to be the popular view of the situation. There seems to be absolutely no suggestion that the increased price will bring a better quality of milk.

GOING UP IN MANY CITIES

Dispatches From Virginia and North Carolina, Showing That Rise Is General.

DANVILLE, VA., December 1.—The prices of milk in Danville show a slight advance during the past several months, but this advance is ascribed to the increase in the price of foodstuffs for the cattle. Milk during the early part of last summer sold at eight cents per quart, but the rate now is ten cents per quart. The reason is to a great extent, however, dependent on how many quarts a customer takes. The price per gallon ranges from twenty-five cents around thirty cents. Milk-drink is scarce, but is sold at twelve and fifteen cents per gallon.

In Danville there appears to be no combination whatever among the milk dealers to control prices. There is competition, and some of the dealers will sell at a lower price than the others.

Lynchburg.

LYNCHBURG, VA., December 1.—The price of milk has risen one cent per quart, an advance of two cents over the last year. The cause of this advance is two-fold. First, the adoption of the milk inspection ordinance, which, among other things, prohibits the use of preservatives; second, the great advance in the price of foodstuffs. Clover hay, selling last year at $2 per ton delivered, is now selling at $2.50, and scarcely to be obtained at all. Other feeds have advanced materially. The supply of milk is limited, some of the dairies being furnished by wheelbarrows from Blacksburg.

Petersburg.

PETERSBURG, VA., December 1.—Since November 1st milk has advanced to ten cents a quart from eight cents, which was the price last year. There is no scarcity. The quality is good.

Roanoke.

ROANOKE, VA., December 1.—Milk is sold at creameries at seven cents per quart, and many private parties sell at six. Last year it was six cents. There will be no advance, although the supply is rather short. The milk is of the best quality.

Norfolk.

NORFOLK, VA., December 1.—The price of milk in Norfolk today, whole milk, is 25 cents per gallon; last year, 22 cents; retail, 20 cents; last year, 20 cents per quart.

Charlotte.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., December 1.—The price of milk in and around Charlotte is eight and one-half cents a quart. There has been no change in this price for several months. That is the result figure. Butter has advanced five cents per pound in the last few months. The supply of milk is plentiful.

Staunton.

STAUNTON, VA., December 1.—The milk supply in this section is short, fresh, delicious, cents gallon, same as last year. Owing to advance of feed, dairy men are contemplating a raise.

Raleigh.

RALEIGH, N. C., December 1.—Barley, corn, and small grain at ten cents per quart to casual and eight cents per quart to regular customers. Skinned milk is five cents per quart, and cream is fifty cents per quart. All milk is sold subject to the approval of the city milk committee, the city buying milk at approximately daily wagons and having it analyzed by official bacteriologists.

Greensboro.

GREENSBORO, N. C., December 1.—Milk prices here for the past month have advanced from seven and eight cents per quart to eight and a half and ten cents per quart. The Japanese claim they are losing money at this because foodstuffs are 10 per cent higher than six months ago. The supply of milk has doubled in the past three months. The largest milksmen here, selling 25 cents per quart, say they can hardly meet the demand, but are making no money owing to the increased cost of labor and feed.

Wilmington.

WILMINGTON, N. C., December 1.—The price of milk is ten cents per quart, the same as last year, but as the price of feed has gone up 10 per cent as a probability of raising next year's supply is furnished above three-fourths of a cent more and one-half cent less. The amount of dairy consumption is estimated to be between twelve and fifteen hundred quarts. This is no milk inspection, but it is being advocated.
